

Building Tactics for Racial Justice

Community Power and War Tax Witness

What do we do when our communities are under attack? Stand up, fight back! From Rochester to Iraq to Standing Rock—Black, Brown, and Indigenous people are under attack. These two workshops, hosted by the Gandhi Institute, will include information on black-led organizing for liberation that is happening here in Rochester as well as information on war tax resistance. War tax resistance is the practice of refusing income taxes to the federal government because of how that money is spent—funding wars in our streets and overseas. These workshops will also discuss the growing effort for this year: to redirect tax money to organizing that is led by Black, Brown, and Indigenous People. Come get involved! Please RSVP by emailing malik@gandhiinstitute.org. Discussion will continue during Sunday potluck.
