

Financial Cuts May Hit Female Studies

By PAULA GANTZ

Despite financial support from the College of Arts and Sciences and the State College of Human Ecology, the Female Studies Program is in danger of extinction for lack of funds.

"Courses heavily depend on funding," said Arlene Ryan, executive director of the program. "If we do not get more money than what we have already, we will have to either close the studies office or abandon the addition of new courses," she said.

Several members of the administration are currently working with a female studies committee to find the needed funds. Both private and public sources are being contacted, according to Richard Saltford, an administrator for sponsored research.

A letter recently was sent by University President Dale R. Corson to the Helena Rubinstein Foundation asking for its "overall umbrella support" according to Saltford.

"We should hear from the foundation and other private sources that have been contacted within a month," he said.

Federal funds are also being sought, but answers from these sources are not expected for at least another two months. Until then no decision regarding next year's courses can be made.

Additional problems are being created by the resignation of Joy D. Osofsky, human development and family studies. With the state colleges' budget freeze, no new appointments can be made, according to Dean David C. Knapp, human ecology.

"Mrs. Osofsky's course, 'The Female Personality,' will not be offered unless a replacement for her is found, Knapp said. "We are exploring finding someone in the department or possibly a temporary appointment."

The State College of Industrial and Labor Relations plans to jointly sponsor a course with female studies next spring. One or two joint appointments are also being considered, according to Dean Robert Risley, ILR.

Mrs. Jennie Farley, academic coordinator of female studies, has approached the Senate Subcommittee on Women to present a resolution supporting the expansion of the Female Studies Program.

This resolution will be presented to the Senate Committee on Minority and Disadvantaged Interests tomorrow. If passed, it will be voted on by the Senate on Thursday.

Laird Urges U.S. to Pay More Attention to Russia

Washington (AP) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said yesterday the United States should focus its attention now on what happens after Vietnam and what is needed to counter Russia's growing momentum.

It is time, he said, to shift the dialogue from "why Vietnamization" to "beyond Vietnam" and to focus on "What's in store for us, from the national security standpoint beyond Vietnam."

Laird also indicated his back of enthusiasm for lifting trade restrictions with Red China.

His comments were made in an interview with U.S. News & World Report.

The Secretary said that while the United States has been tied down in Southeast Asia since 1965 Russia has been able to use its defense resources to attain a position of "more or less parity in the strategic nuclear weapons area" and at the same time has gone forward with naval modernization and ground force modernization. Russia, he said has a "tremendous weapons momentum."

Laird was asked if it would be appropriate for U.S. businessmen to trade with Red China.

He replied: "You could make a case for it on the basis that we already trade with the Soviet Union, and most of the outside support for the war comes from them. But I don't make that case."

Cornell Law Applications Increase Fifty Per Cent

This year has seen an unparalleled increase in the number of applications for enrollment in the Cornell Law School. The increase of 50 per cent over last year is attributed largely to an apparent belief among many applicants that a legal education is the best way to effect social change, according to Donald M. Sheraw, assistant dean for admissions.

Preparation to deal with such great social problems as urban blight, civil rights, ecology and poverty were most often cited by applicants as reasons for wishing to enter the legal profession, he said.

Sheraw explained there has been a steady increase in applications during the past ten years, but nothing to compare to this year's.

"Needless to say, the competition for the 155 to 160 openings for next fall's first class is rather keen," he said.

Such factors as the slowing up of the economy and a steady increase in female and minority applicants have contributed to the unusual increase, Sheraw said.

The job squeeze which has propelled students into applying to law school is affecting seniors generally, making their futures much less clear than they might have expected.

European Currency Adjusted

Bonn, Germany (AP) — The West German government decided yesterday to let the mark seek its own level on international money markets to stem the flow of unwanted U.S. dollars.

At the same time, the Swiss franc was revalued upward by 7 per cent in a move last night to ward off the flow of dollars that produced a crisis in international currency markets.

Chancellor Willy Brandt said in a nationwide television address the German move did not amount to an upward revaluation of the mark. That would make German goods more expensive and less competitive in world markets.

European Common Market finance ministers, at an overnight meeting in Brussels, gave West Germany and other countries the okay to let their currencies float.

Karl Schiller, West Germany's finance minister, told a news conference here yesterday he expected the mark to increase in value temporarily.

Schiller said in a statement the Central Bank "will cease its intervention" in behalf of the dollar today. The Brussels agreement, he added, was "a compromise for which we all worked hard."

Schiller emphasized the compromise was important because it meant there would be no change of currency parity within the Common Market and because it provided for a widening of the mark fluctuation limit "from which the cabinet has drawn its conclusions."

Switzerland was told of its nation's decision in a special television address by President Rudolf Gnaegi, who explained that this was the only step possible under the conditions.

The dollar flow into Switzerland has totalled $1.3 billion during the past six weeks, fueling an inflation that was already running at 5.9 per cent during the past 12 months.

Big Red Defeats Bruins In Key Ivy Lacrosse Tilt

By PAUL KAYE

Special to The Cornell Daily Sun

Providence, R.I. — "Write about the boys; they deserve it." A superb display of skill and inspiration by the Cornell lacrosse team earned those words from Coach Richie Moran as the Big Red beat Brown by 12-4 before 1500 raucous Bruin fans.

The Ivy League showdown was the crucial game on Cornell's calendar. The victory virtually assures the Red of at least a piece of the Ivy title. Brown's league record is now 5-1; Cornell's is 4-0 with only Dartmouth and Princeton, the two weakest teams in the loop, left to play.

The Big Red's play was practically flawless. Although Brown held all the statistical edges, the Cornell defense was impenetrable.

Brown's star attackman, Bob Scalise, was held scoreless for the first time this year by junior defenseman Bill Ellis. Ellis was all over his man, never allowing him to get off a good shot.

Mariner 8 Fails Martian Mission

Cape Kennedy, Fla. (AP) — "We're heartbroken," a space agency official said yesterday as investigators sought a reason for the failure of the Mariner 8 Mars shot and crews prepared a twin craft, Mariner 9, for launching May 18.

Mariner 9 could be delayed, depending on what the investigation turns up. But hope was expressed that if Mariner 9 is launched, it will be able to perform some functions originally planned for Mariner 8.

The first half of the $53.6 billion project to orbit Mars with two satellites failed Saturday night less than five minutes after liftoff. The second stage of the Atlas-Centaur rocket tumbled out of control 92 miles above the earth and plunged with its payload into the Atlantic Ocean 900 miles southeast of Cape Kennedy.

"The mission is lost," came the terse announcement from the launch control center.

Several days may be required to pinpoint the cause of the failure, but initial study of radio data indicated a fault with the Centaur's flight control system.

"It could be something as simple as a loose or broken wire," an official said.

Robert S. Kraemer, director of planetary programs for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said "it is our intent while doing the detailed investigation to proceed right ahead with our plans to launch the second Mariner on May 18.

Rogers Mildly Optimistic Regarding Mideast Peace

Rome (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers flew home yesterday with a mildly optimistic report for President Nixon on the results of his Middle East peace mission.

Rogers had spend 26 hours in Rome on his way to Washington from the Middle East. During his visit here the secretary of state encouraged Italian leaders to keep up their own Middle East peace efforts.

He also obtained a pledge from Pope Paul VI to help American prisoners of war in Vietnam "in a humanitarian way."

Rogers' visit to Rome, following a swing through five Middle East countries, touched off wild rioting Saturday night. A thousand Maoist-line leftists threw fire bombs at police, burned two police cars, broke shop windows and erected street barricades.

Rogers concluded his two-week foreign journey with a news conference Saturday night in which he made clear that he felt more encouraged about the possibilities of a Mideast peace now than when he left Washington.

Summing up his findings in talks with Israeli and Arab officials, Rogers said "prospects have been improved to some extent" for an accord opening the Suez Canal. But he added that this did not mean "the prospect for the opening of Suez is bright."

University to Appoint Housing Co-ordinator

A Director of Student Housing Services will be among the many appointments planned for this summer.

The new position carries the responsibility of planning and coordinating the operations of both single and married student housing.

According to Dean of Students Elmer E. Meyer Jr., who will appoint the director, cutting costs, increasing efficiency, and developing a coherent maintenance plan for the dorms are all within the realm of the director.

Meyer said he hopes that the new appointee will provide "solid direction in the management-operations end" of the housing system.

He added, however, that "change isn't really occurring" other than having a central administrator in charge of operating the housing services.

The new director will be chosen in time to start work on or before July 1. There have been three applicants so far, and it is expected that there will be more.

One applicant from Pennsylvania State University, and one from Oakland University in Michigan have already visited the campus to familiarize themselves with the housing system and meet with the University Senate Subcommittee on Student Housing.

The third applicant, Gerald Francis of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor is here today and will meet with the subcommittee this afternoon.

Postage Boost Due on Sunday

Washington (AP) — Postage rates are going up next Sunday unless a federal judge frustrates the U.S. Postal Service. It will take eight cents to mail a letter and 11 cents if you send it by air.

The May 16 boost comes under what the Postal Service claims is its authority to make temporary increases in postal rates pending a recommendation by the Postal Rate Commission.

A group of mail users, led by magazine and newspaper publishers, have challenged the right of the Postal Board of Governors to use such authority.

"DEAR MR. HITCHCOCK: It is typical of my brother to attempt to deceive his constituents. It was, of course, he, not I, who appeared on Laugh-In, just as you suspected. On the other hand, you need not worry about it. His greatest deception is as yet undiscovered. It was I, not he, who was elected to the Senate. So you see, you have nothing to worry about. Yours, Wm. F. Buckley Jr."

Women: Not You

Joanna Russ

Friends of mine have a clever and honest three year old boy who recently discovered a new word: Not-you. "I want somebody to read to me, not-you." "Get me a glass of milk, not-you." "I want to be put to bed, not-you." Often the word is used to indicate which parent he prefers at the moment: sometimes it helps to fend off visitors: "I want to play, not you."

My first reaction to "Not-you" was that I had heard it before. Eventually it occurred to me that "Not-you" is fastened, like a kind of invisible neon sign, to most of the roles and activities in our society. Hero, leader, politico, doctor, teacher, wheeler-dealer, poet, astronaut, revolutionary, messiah, intellectual — all have the invisible addition that remains quiescent most of the time but lights up if a woman gets anywhere near it: Not-you. (There are other sorts of people who trigger the sign, for example, black saying: Not you. That is, not too many of you.

Undergraduate Days

When I speak of the discrimination our society practices against women, I remember my undergraduate days. Certainly I wasn't discriminated against, quite the contrary.

I remember freshman anthologies on Mann the Culture-Maker and Man the Tool-Maker and Man the Rebel and The Brotherhood of Man. I even remember Peking Man and Java Man. When I remarked on this, I was told that it was only a rhetorical convenience; "Man" meant mankind, that is, everybody. I believed it until I found the single chapters and special appendices in the backs of the books: Women in Ancient Rome, Feminine Psychology, Modern Women: Is She Lost?, Women Writers: Their Special Problems, and so on.

Rhetorical Convenience

It seemed that the "rhetorical convenience" explanation was not quite accurate — Mankind, it seemed, was male. Women were more than mankind or less than mankind or a minority of mankind or a special form of mankind. That is: Mankind, Not-you. There was the Glamorous Drunken Poet, Phosphorescently Doomed Not-you. There was the Existential Hero Full of Angst Not-you (a recent freshman composition anthology has two Existential Heroines: Jacqueline Onassis and Sophia Loren). There was the absolute lack of attention given to feminism as a historical phenomenon. There was the writing teacher who exclaimed innocently, "Why can't any woman write like Hemingway?" There were the endless variations on male adolescence: Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man (Not-you). There was the assumption that everybody believed but nobody notices, that women writers were, of course, minor writers, and not worth studying. So we studied Christopher Smart but not Aphra Behn. We studied E.M. Forster but not Virginia Woolf. (I did not even know of her "A Room of One's Own," which speaks to just this question, until years later.) We read Thackeray, who was splendid, but not Charlotte Bronte, who was eccentric, minor, and dull. Emily Bronte and George Eliot were mentioned but I did not have to read them. Jane Austen was delicate and kittenish, also limited (because she did not write about the Napoleonic Wars). Emily Dickinson, aside from a few eccentric professors who were thought to be a little extreme on the subject, was known to be cranky, over-cute, inexperienced, and really a special taste. Hawthorne, on the contrary, was profound and important.

None of this, of course, was part of any conscious conspiracy. Nobody was out to get me (or anybody else). In fact, professors worried about their female students' apathy and passivity; they wished the girls would speak up more in class. In writing class, I remember one story about strenuous adventure-sex, full of screams, groans, balls, sperm, pronging, blood, gore, desperation, and "animal grunts." The class judged this to be profound, raw, deep, and true. I remember another about girls going to their first dance; this was trivial. So the girls did not speak up in class. (We still judge literature by its subject-matter; roughly speaking, power counts — and books about power and violence are automatically judged to be better than other books. And "broader.")

Art Too

In short, Art too has that little sign attached to it that lights up only when women approach: Not-you.

Somebody needs to take that sign off. Female Studies is one way of doing it. In my view, Female Studies is not a discipline in itself but a way of correcting existing disciplines both by re-interpretation and by research — since the existing disciplines do not show much sign of correcting themselves. It seems to me that unless one understands that little "Not-you" sign and its causes, one cannot teach Female Studies. That is, Female Studies must be feminist or there is no reason for it to exist. Students in female studies will sometimes ask why we don't present "the other side." We don't because the other side is all around us, in the University as in every other institution. It is because the other side is all around us that Female Studies has to exist.

It is obvious that Female Studies will be important in some disciplines, irrelevant to others. For example, Female Studies courses will be crucial in history or the social and psychological sciences, very important in literature and art, important only in certain areas of biology (I would think so anyway), and not related at all to physics or mathematics

At Cornell

There are five Female Studies courses offered at Cornell right now.

3 credits — Education 470 (Agr) Women in Education — a section of Ed. 470, Educational Issues in a Democracy — Bereaud

4 credits — English 482 (Arts) The Representation of Women in Literature — Russ

3 or 4 credits — HDFS 390 (Hum Ec) Evolution of the Female Personality — Osofsky

3 credits — Rural Sociology 374 (Agr) Sociology of the Female Labor Force — Farley

3 credits — Bio Sci 204A (Arts) Women in Society — a section of Bio Sci 202, Biology and Society — Feeny

While, middle-class, Western males (remember the dance over women's weekend this term) are not used to the little sign "Not-you" because it doesn't light up when they approach a prestigious role, or an exciting activity — or an academic discipline. Therefore most of them don't think it exists. When it lights up from them — once in a lifetime — they get furious. Female Studies is one way of erasing those Not-you's.

No more Not-You's.

Prof. Joanna Russ, English, is teaching "Representations of Women in Literature" this semester.

Letters

To Pres. Corson

(Pres. Corson received the following letter Friday.)

Dear Dr. Corson:

During the past several weeks we have had a series of correspondence with you and other university officials on the general subject of the "Program for Minority Education," and the specific topic of the "Coordinator of Minority Affairs" position which was proposed in that program. To date, no resolution of our respective positions on either the general program or the specific position has been achieved.

As such, with the semester drawing to a close and the possibilities for sustained communication diminishing, we are forced to demand that the University adhere to the following guidelines:

(1) No new program or position relating to Black education will be instituted without a supporting referendum of the Black persons affected by such developments;

(2) In view of the fact that the University has utilized full-time professional staff to develop and study the plan currently proposed, the University will fund a Black research team to study the proposed plan and, possibly, develop alternatives during the summer of 1971. This team will be paid for full-time work during the months of June, July, and August, and will be composed of one person from Affirmative Action, one from Africana Studies, one undergraduate (COSEP), and one graduate student — all of whom will be chosen by this committee with the approval of the Black community.

Awaiting your prompt response, we must inform you that a negative reply will compel us to use every skill, technique, and resource at our command to organize the Black community into overt opposition to your program.

Sincerely,

people.) In general, we have gotten beyond the point of saying explicitly that we want our teachers to be male (and white) or that real heroes are male heroes, or that "feminine leader" is a contradiction in terms. And there are a few teachers, poets, heroes, messiahs, intellectuals and so on, who are in fact women. The Not-you is harder to find than it used to be. For example, women have been educated at Cornell for almost a century, but equal numbers of male and female first-year students entered the Arts College only this year. (This is still a quota; if students were admitted on the basis of qualification alone, there would be more women than men in the Arts College.) To deny women higher education is a very obvious kind of Not-you. To admit them to the Arts College as a minority is a more subtle Not-you. To admit them to the Arts College under a fifty per cent quota is still a Not-you. It is

Cheaters Face Penalties

Students who plagiarize or cheat on exams or papers may face suspension from the University if they are caught, according to a warning issued by the Student-Faculty Committee on Academic Integrity.

With the approach of final exams and the pressure that can cause increased plagiarism and cheating, the committee reviewed penalties given out during the 1970-71 academic year for violations of academic integrity.

During the past year, eight cases of plagiarism were heard by the committee. Four students were suspended for a semester as a result of these hearings.

All Things Black and Beautiful

By FRANK WASHINGTON

TO ALL THINGS BLACK AND BEAUTIFUL. A play conceived and directed by Chestyn Everett. At Alice Statler Auditorium, May 8-9.

Song, rhythm, dance, and music, the tools of expression that the Black man seems to wield with the greatest eloquence, set the theme for this United Black Artists' production. The combination of these arts along with a smattering of interludes from the works of several of Black America's greatest playwrights and poets capture the spirit of the Black man's existence and history in this country.

It is questionable whether or not the word brilliant is sufficient in describing Chestyn Everett's sometimes bitter sometimes sweet, forceful yet gentle, refined but funky, conception and direction of this pageant.

In the final analysis it may be the sheer immenseness of the territory that this play ranges over that engenders the greatest amazement. There are scenes that chronicle the Black man's passage in this country from his chained arrival to the airless, hate-tensed confines of a New York City subway car in Leroi Jones' "Dutchman." Mr. Everett, however, does not stop at just a historical account. He travels beyond the presentation of mere events and, through the skillful intertwining of song, poetry, and dance, he assembles the fears, hopes, and strengths that ring most true to the black experience as it really is.

It is the music that assists the most in holding this entire production together. Mario Baeza, the music director, has done an admirable job, not only in terms of the fine arrangements, but also through his well calculated break-offs of and lead-intos for the drama and poetry. Another member of the band, Phil Newmuis, also contributed notably with his free flowing play on the sax and flute.

Also deserving note is Sharon Williams, mostly for her beautifully devised and executed choreography but not to omit her moving portrayal of the Black woman's dilemma in the scene from "Blues For Mister Charlie" by James Baldwin.

Other standouts were Charles Shepard for his inspired recreation of the arm flailing, amen provoking, Baptist preacher and Dennis Williams for his meaningful recitations of poetry.

"To All Things Black and Beautiful" is open to many levels of interpretation, not the least of them being just damn good entertainment. However, if I were to chose the one that meant the most to me it would revolve around the name of the last poem in the play, "For May People." I wish that every Black person in the country could have been in the audience.

Peace Corps

Peace Corps Director Joseph Blatchford has announced that the agency has reversed a four-year decline in applications from prospective volunteers.

"The heartening response from Americans of all ages, backgrounds and races demonstrated that the Peace Corps continues to hold a strong appeal for those who want to help their fellow man," said Blatchford.

With four months of recruiting still to go, applications are expected to reach a total of 26,000. Last year's total was 19,022 — a four-year low.

Literary Journal

WATU Reflects New Black Art

VILLALKER JR. examinations in blues-jazz moments are reflected in the fourth edition of "WATU," the literary journal published by Cornell black students in conjunction with the Africana Center.

In its introduction, James Cunningham comments: "...it is no accident that this issue reflects a greater interest in fiction and if not less of an interest in poetry, there certainly is more concern with a poetry of a differing sort..."

WATU, as well as the undergrad black community as a whole, has been significantly influenced, for better or worse, by Blacks '74. They bring with them a solid familiarity with the times and the need to understand themselves and their racing lives in spite of and in reaction to the Collectivity and the Dream/Goals. There has come a certain honesty that machine-gun poems did not allow before. These writers are reaching for "a more personal and concrete level of expression," within and along with a growing revolutionary frame of reference.

It is from this development that, in the Billie Holiday/Coltrane tradition, a sustaining, supportive Black Art is nurtured.

"WATU" will be on sale at Willard Straight and the Africana Center starting today.

BRIDGE CORNER

The gallon and a half of wine and the two boxes of pretzels were gone while the night was still young, but the nine tables of bridge players who turned out for the last Cornell bridge tournament of the 1970-71 season didn't seem to mind. For Dan Margulis and Peter Illing, the night was a personal tour de force. Their 140½ points, 32½ above the 106 average, gave them a very fine 65.0 per cent game. Bonnie Brier and Arnie Resnick were runnersup with 133, just ahead of Ken Levy and Jeff Cersonsky, who scored 131½. Benson Ho and Alan Lindmark were fourth with 126, Scott Shiffner and Peter Jackson fifth with 121½, and Ira Kastrinsky and Henry Pullman sixth with 118. Also above average were Tom Menges and Dave Reiner, and Ted Emonds and Greg Chou.

The honor game was the fourth of the year for Illing and the second for Margulis. Dave Tracy and Roger Gans were the pacesetters in honor game accumulations with six apiece. Illing and Peter Levine each had four, Fred Jacob three, and Margulis, Alan Lindmark, Tom Menges, Harry Bonacquist, Scott Shiffner, and Tom Falduto two each. Several others had one.

Well, I guess it's time to say "See you next year" to those who will return next fall and "Farewell, pal" to those who won't. It's been great fun. I'll not soon forget the night of the first Swiss team game, when we had bridge players hanging from the rafters; the night I forgot the bye-stand, and we met the same boards half-way through; or Stian and Benson's all-time low 22 per cent game. But what I'll ultimately remember about this year is the remarkable bond of camaraderie and friendship that developed among our regular players. This convivial and fun-filled fellowship has made our tournament something special. My thanks to all my friends, the members of the Cornell Bridge Club, the people who made it go.

HALVERSON

602 W. SENECA ST.

The word is out on Donny Hathaway.

A few weeks ago, the superb composer-singer Carole King picked up eight copies of Donny's first LP ("Everything Is Everything," produced by himself) and distributed them to her heaviest pals and gurus—such as Lou Adler and James Taylor—with the exhortation to dig.

The next portent came at Aretha Franklin's recent epochal appearance at the Fillmore West, where she and Ray Charles were rapping backstage about Donny, who, in their modest opinions is just about the "baddest" new entry on the scene.

And a few days later, at the Criteria Studios in Miami, superstar Steve Stills, working on his new album, sounded me: "Hey, what's the chance of Donny Hathaway coming down to pick on my album?"

The word is definitely out.

The liner notes to Donny's first LP inform us that he (1) Was born in Chicago in 1945 (2) Attended Howard University (3) Played his first music jobs in the Washington, D.C. area (4) Then achieved heavy acclaim in the trade for his singing, playing, arranging, composing, and producing for such as Roberta Flack, Curtis Mayfield, Jerry Butler, and others.

Here at Atlantic, where we have had the privilege of working with Ray Charles, Aretha Franklin and Otis Redding, we are daring to hope that Donny eventually may join them in the special pantheon of those specially gifted few who:

Sing the best.
Play the best.
Compose the best.
Arrange the best.

As for his string, horn, and choral arrangements, please listen to the soul-shivering instrumental interlude in Giving Up where first King Curtis' tenor sax break lifts the record to a new elevation—followed by a string ensemble that takes it yet higher again—climax upon unbelievable climax. When I played his Little Girl side for its writer, the wonderful Billy Preston (great artist that he is in his own right), Billy was transfixed by the record—Donny's singing, keyboard playing, and fantastic arrangement for voices and strings.

And I would like to be there when Bobby Scott hears what Donny does with He Ain't Heavy, the definitive soul rendition that a lot of people I know have been waiting for.

I have been playing the album for some weeks now for friends, family and colleagues, and the reaction is always the same: joy and stunned disbelief. We are in great hopes that this portends a wide acceptance by an appreciative audience for Donny Hathaway and this album, produced with abiding love, meticulous care, and, we dearly pray, impeccable taste.

My special thanks to our own King Curtis, who found Donny Hathaway at a trade convention and who brought him posthaste to my office. And the same to our own Arif Mardin who split with Donny the arranging chores, coming through with his usual brilliance and unfailing musicality. Listen to the flutes and cellos on Ari's treatment of Leon Russell's ineffable A Song For You, and I think you will see why Ari's is probably the fastest growing reputation among the new breed of arrangers and musicians. And thanks, deeply, to our great rhythm section: Cornell Dupree on guitar, Chuck Rainey on bass, and the legendary Al Jackson, who came up to New York from Memphis to handle the percussion.

The contribution represented the 10 per cent phone tax that was levied to help finance the Vietnam war.
The sum withheld was donated to the Southside Day Care and Child Development program, in order to demonstrate the belief that tax revenues needed for health and education programs are instead being spent on war.

"We insist that funds be spent for growth, nurture and healing, not for maiming and destruction — spent for life instead of death," wrote Matlack in a letter to the Internal Revenue Service.
According to Section 7203 of the Internal Revenue Code, people who refuse to pay the tax could possibly be imprisoned up to one year and fined up to $10,000. The telephone company is not responsible for enforcing tax payment and will not discontinue service.
Tax resistance demonstrations similar to Saturday's protest are scheduled to be held once a month.

In New York a spokesman for the Chase Manhattan Bank said: "It will take a little while for the mark to settle down, but we will be able to establish a future market."
The spokesman, Eugene Birnbaum, vice president for international monetary affairs at Chase, reported his chief concern now is that the floating rate for the mark should not persist too long.

The Red freshman and jayvee boats, by virtue of their second or third place showings in the morning qualifying heats, earned berths in the afternoon's finals. Hopes for a Cornell crew to compete in each final were dashed, however, when the Red varsity boat finished fifth in its heat.
The afternoon competition began at 2:30 with the lightweight reserve races. Rowing in the wind-affected second lane, the Cornell varsity

Law Applications Up

"Times have changed. We are no longer in the golden days of the 60's when recruiters from the nation's leading firms waited in line to talk to graduates of top schools like Cornell," said John Munschauer, Cornell University's Placement Director.
"Now, instead of spending most of our time arranging on-campus interviews with recruiters, we are spending our time encouraging students to finished fifth.

The freshman lightweight finalists were given the "get ready — ready all — go" commands at 4:00. Penn, trying an early sprint in hopes of catching Harvard, had to settle for second place, as Harvard's sprint carried the boat across the line 3.4 seconds ahead of the Quakers. The Red frosh, 13.2 seconds behind the Crimson, placed sixth.
In the jayvee final, Navy, using Penn's early sprint tactics, suffered a similar second-place finish, as Harvard won by 3.5

seconds. The Cornell J.V.'s finished in fifth place.
The stage was then set for the Harvard sweep. Never headed, the Crimson varsity turned on a powerful surge in the last 500 meters to win by a convincing 3½ lengths over second place Columbia.

Netmen Bow

It was the same old story for the Cornell tennis team Friday, as the Big Red fell to Columbia by an 8-1 margin. Dirk Dugan, Eddie Moylan's sophomore star, downed the Lions' Robert Binns in straight sets for the lone Red point.

On top of the bill is The Making of Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, a sort of journal in film about the production of last year's smart-alecky Western hit. It shows how the big special effects were done, where the location sequences in Bolivia really were done (you guessed it: Mexico) and, incidentally, what Butch, Sundance and Etta Place really looked like: Butch looked like Hemingway, Sundance looked 20 years older than Robert Redford and Etta looked like, well, like Katharine Ross!

Although the Butch Cassidy documentary is entertaining, it's just an appetizer for the second movie about a movie, The Epic That Never Was, which must be seen by all film buffs. It is a reconstruction of the failure of the late Josef von Sternberg's 1937 adaptation of Robert Graves' novel, I, Claudius.

Stickmen Rip Brown to Take Ivy Lead

Moran Eyes Playoffs

Having practically clinched the Ivy lacrosse title by beating Brown, the Cornell stickmen are now beginning to think about their second goal — the NCAA championship.

This year, for the first time, the national title will be decided in an eight team playoff. In past year, the champion was selected by the coaches. Last year, Cornell was unbeaten, but the Big Red was denied a share of the crown, which was awarded to Virginia, Johns-Hopkins, and Navy as tri-champs.

The playoff structure is very complicated, and even coach Richie Moran has to look in the NCAA handbook to figure it all out.

Collegiate lacrosse is broken down into four divisions along geographical lines. Each division will send one team, and then one team will be picked from the two northern divisions, and one from the southern and western divisions. Finally, two teams will be chosen at large.

Cornell is in Division II, comprising New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Army and Navy are also in Division II.

The New England Division (Div. I) will undoubtedly have Brown as its representative. Virginia, Maryland, and Air Force all figure to be selected from the southern divisions, and Army will probably be chosen from Division II.

Cornell's hopes lie in the at-large berths. The Red may be chosen as the second team from the northern divisions, or it may go to the tournament as a general at-large choice. It will be vying with Navy, Hofstra, and Cortland for these spots.

The selection committee is comprised of five coaches and athletic directors from teams not involved in the playoffs.

Cornell Still Alive; Harvard Nine Loses

Consider the possibilities ... Going into this weekend's Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League action, it appeared that Harvard had the title all but locked up. The Crimson, however, bowed to Columbia 7-6 on Friday and lost two to Princeton (9-6, 11-2) Saturday.

The Big Red was rained out of its doubleheader with Army and now stands at 7-4. The Crimson have completed the full league slate with a 9-5 record. The Army games will be rescheduled for a date set when the AD's of the two schools confer today.

A sweep or split against the Cadets will force the makeup of the Cornell-Navy game which was washed out earlier.

Three wins would give Ted Thoren's team the championship outright, but if they should win only two and tie Harvard, the league coaches will be polled to determine whether a playoff will be held. Harvard has downed the Red twice this season.

Pending the results of their make-up twin bill with Yale, Navy also has a shot at a tie. The Middies are now 6-5.

Thoren is hopeful that the makeup contests will be spread out to allow his squad a breather, but the title picture must be cleared up within the next two weeks.

If the Red wins the league, it will get a berth in the NCAA Middle Atlantic regionals, and if Harvard emerges victorious, it will go to the New England regionals.

Shaw, Rimmer Pace Offense; Rule Sparkles in Nets

The midfielders were the offensive stars, scoring eight of the Cornell tallies. All-Ivy Bob Shaw had his finest game of the season, putting five shots past Bruin goalie Doug Spiro.

All three midfielders played tight defense, especially in the man-down situations.

Attackman Al Rimmer continued to pile up the points, assisting on five goals to bring his totals for the year to 22-22-44 in collegiate play.

Cornell goalie Bob Rule was sensational, stopping 23 shots to bring his save percentage up to .780. Rule leads the Ivies with an .840 average in league play.

In a game matching two teams so close in talent and depth, the ability to capitalize on mistakes was especially important. Cornell made the most of its chances, taking only the good shots and using the man-up situations to the best advantage.

Cornell scored on four of its six man-up tries against a team that had allowed only six goals in 53 penalties. The Red extra man performance was its best of the year.

Brown, on the other hand, was unable to score on seven man-up tries, a statistic that becomes more remarkable when compared to their previous average of 35 per cent conversion on the extra man situation.

Brown controlled the first two minutes of play, but Shaw cashed in on a penalty to Brown's Bill Cairns and put the Red on the board at 3:17.

Frank Davis made a great play on a Rimmer rebound at 5:13, but Brown came right back a minute later and appeared to regain their momentum.

Shaw then put on a dazzling show, scoring twice in two minutes. Both goals came on well-executed dodges and fakes, with Shaw whipping the ball past Spiro from the restraining line on both occasions.

Brown sandwiched a goal between Shaw's feats, but three straight goals by Cornell put the Red in front 7-2 halfway in the second period. The half ended with the score at 9-3.

The pace of the game slowed in the second half. Cornell elected to play a more conservative game and the Bruins took charge, outshooting the Red 28-12 in the half.

Rule was called on to make eight saves in the third period as Brown dominated play.

Red Trackmen Down Princeton For First Win

By KATE WAITS

The weather was dark and gloomy Saturday afternoon at Schoellkopf, but everything was bright for the Big Red trackmen, as they downed Princeton 87-65 for their first dual meet victory of the season.

Although the rain stopped by the time the meet got under way, conditions were far from ideal. In addition to the problem of keeping warm in the chilly Ithaca atmosphere, competitors had to contend with strong winds and a puddle-covered track.

The meet featured several close races, and Cornell was fortunate to win them all. In the 100-yard dash, Glen Fausset and Dave Bethea ran stride for stride with Bill Foucher of Princeton, but Fausset lunged at the finish to win the event (Bethea took third).

Fausset also recorded victories in the long and triple jumps.

Another close contest was the 400-yard run, in which John Wyrough edged out the Tigers' Fred Schnure by inches. A pair of Cornellians, Tom Baker and Tex Cohen, showed their ability to come from behind in their events.

It looked as though Baker, the 1,000-yard indoor heps champ, would finish third in the half mile, but in the closing yards he snuck in front of Princeton's John Oyler to place second behind Cornell's Charlie Ferrell. Cohen was in second with only a short distance left in the 220-yard dash, but his finishing kick propelled him to victory.

Don Alexander was the only other double winner for the Red, besides Fausset, taking the one and three mile runs.

Habs Top Hawks

Frank Mahovich scored two goals and led the Montreal Canadiens to a 4-2 comeback win over the Chicago Black Hawks in Stanley Cup play yesterday.

The victory left Montreal trailing the best of seven series, by 2-1, with game four set for Montreal Tuesday.

Navy, Harvard Dominate Eastern Sprints

By RICHARD M. WARSHAUER and SHERM SMITH
Special to The Cornell Daily Sun

Worcester, Mass. — The smart money was proven right again Saturday when top-seeded Navy won the heavyweight finals of the Eastern Sprint crew races on Lake Quinisigamond. In a big upset, Rutgers took second place.

It was not a good day for Cornell. Only the lightweight freshman and junior varsity, and the heavyweight "second varsity" (JV) made it into the final afternoon races.

Nor was it a good day for the spectators, who sat in chilling rain for most of the races. Race officials optimistically stated that there were 1,200 paid spectators and 5,000 spectators in all to a group of incredulous reporters.

The sprints, run by the Eastern Association of Rowing Colleges, featured 74 crews from 16 colleges for the 26th annual running of the event.

In an almost exact rerun of last year's disappointing championships, the heavyweight freshmen missed going into the finals by one-tenth of a second.

Harvard easily won that heat in 6:29.4, followed by Rutgers in 6:33.1. The Big Red frosh went on to take second place in the reserve (consolation) heat.

"I think the oarsmen did a great job under the circumstances," said Cornell coach Todd Jesdale. "I thought it (the stroke rate) was just about where we wanted it. It was a little low right in the middle, but not too bad."

"We'll just have to keep working the stroke rate up," he added. "The freshmen particularly can benefit from this."

The heavyweight jayvees finished last in the finals, and the varsity came in third in the reserve heat.

In the lightweight events, Harvard swept the freshman, jayvee, and varsity finals for the third time in four years, and maintained its hold on the Ralph T. Joep Cup, awarded to the team scoring the most points in the three top races. In the trophy competition, Cornell finished in
